Nat M. Brigham In His New Role of Lecturer.

After an absence of more than two | Mr. Brigham is known as a charm wears, the well-remembered Nat K. Brigham has returned to Salt Lake, where admiring friends greet him, in the role of a lecturer. Almost ever since Mr. Brigham left here he has been preparing a series of high class been preparing a series of high class and Moki Indian songs and in future lectures, which he intends to prepare.

been preparing a series of high class lectures, under the general title of "Strange Corners of Our Country," and now he is just launching on his professional career. In fact his lectures in the Assembly hall on Tuesday evening and Friday evening will mark the beginning of his long tour through the east.

When asked last evening at the Kenyon to teli The Herald something about his lecture plans, Mr. Brigham said he had spent many months in the exploration of the Grand Canyon of the Coloado river and tributary region in company with George L. Rose, a photographer of Pasadena, Cal., which also is Mr. Brigham's home, gathering material for his lectures. He likes the work he has taken up and is enthusiastic over the prospects for success which seem to be within his grasp. His first lecture on "The Grand Canyon of Arizona," was delivered before an audience of 5,000 persons at the great Chautauqua last summer and the verdict given then, many who heard it being his old college classmates from Harvard, was that the effort needed no improvement. Since then, however, Mr. Brigham has revised and embellished this and others of his lectures and recently delivered them in the cities of southern California. All of them have taken well.
